Graduate Writing Groups (GWGs) are forming now and open to anyone enrolled as a graduate student at UM. Regular informal sessions assist writers with their writing projects.

Graduate Writing Groups (sponsored by the Department of Writing & Rhetoric and CETL and facilitated by the Graduate Writing Center) are being established for the upcoming Spring semester. Regular informal sessions are designed to offer graduate students space and time to focus on scholarly research and publishing, to help encourage progress with ongoing writing projects, and to provide peer-supported spaces for work on major program projects (i.e., theses or dissertations). UM GWG participants will meet and work together in small groups of 4-6 people to assist members with an issue or project they are working on individually. GWGs can be formed of participants across disciplines or specialized around specific classes, disciplines, or cohorts.

GWGs are forming now, and first meetings begin soon. Sessions typically meet for 1-2 hours once or twice a month each semester and are open to any graduate student at UM. Please contact Dr. Claire Mischker (gwc@olemiss.edu or x3173) if you are interested in participating in a GWG or if you are faculty and would like to discuss forming a group for a specific class, cohort, or department.
